

Hello there my dear! I bet you weren't expecting to hear from a fairy today but I heard it was your birthday so I flew over the rainbow, through the magical mist which separates your world from ours and past the second star on the left of your house to find you. I wanted to be the first to wish you a happy birthday when you wake!

Do you know who I am yet? I'm the Birthday Fairy. Have you heard of me? Well, when a boy like you has been very good and is someone very special, it's my job to travel from Fairyland to your world on his birthday. I carry a special present too, it's called birthday luck dust, and I sprinkle it on children while they sleep. I have already sprinkled some on you. You won't be able to see it of course, but it should bring you luck all year. And you deserve it my dear, for I can tell that you are kind and clever and caring... and that you bring so much joy to all those around you. Well done.

I must fly away now as it's a long journey home. I hope you enjoy reading this little note on the morning of your birthday. It's a magical day you know - and the world is a better place because you were born.

All my love,
The Birthday Fairy x
